Inversione di marcia nella fraseologia delle relazioni internazionali

Geopolitica e ritorno della competizione tra le Grandi Potenze erano assenti nel vocabolario internazionale degli ultimi tre decenni

Ora sono tornati e Geopolitica (che è strettamente collegata all'ineluttabilità della competizione) oggi è usata come sinonimo di Relazioni Internazionali

«Ogni grande trasformazione storica comporta quasi sempre un cambiamento del vocabolario»
(Carl Schmitt, Land und meer, 1942)

La Germania è stata la patria della geopolitica

Friedrich Ratzel (1844–1904) pensatore tedesco + Rudolf Kjellén (1864–1922) pensatore svedese

Un simile approccio dopo il 1945 fu considerato pericoloso a causa dei legami della scuola con il nazismo

Francis Fukuyama

The End of History (1989)

«Ciò a cui forse stiamo assistendo non è solo la fine della Guerra Fredda, o il superamento di un particolare periodo della storia del dopoguerra, ma la fine della storia in quanto tale: cioè il punto finale dell'evoluzione ideologica dell'umanità e l'universalizzazione dell'Occidente la democrazia liberale come forma finale di governo umano»

Robert Kagan
The Return of History (2009)

«Le speranze per un nuovo ordine internazionale pacifico dopo la fine della Guerra Fredda sono state deluse da realtà che fanno riflettere: le Grandi Potenze sono ancora una volta in competizione per onore e influenza»

[2] Ernest Mandel dates the end of the post-war upswing to 1968. Later analysis by Joshua Goldstein suggests it runs to 1980.

Germania, i risultati in Baviera e Assia: sfonda l'estrema destra, in crisi il governo Scholz

di Mara Gergolet

In Baviera non arriva il trionfo sperato dal governatore della Csu Söder. Conservatori e Afd in salita, anche in Assia frenano i socialdemocratici. Prospettive cupe per il governo della Semaforo guidato da Scholz
